SUBJECT: THE FRASER SUBCOMMITTEE HEARINGS

Among the several Korean spectators, the presence of Admiral KIM, Yong-kwan (ret.) was noteworthy. He was formerly the Korean chief of naval operations and ambassador to South Vietnam. It is said that he has been staying in the States for more than two months. The following are the highlights of the hearings:

1. [redacted] said that the 1976 Plan for Operations in the United States was drafted in the U.S. and finalized at the U.S. operations desk, KCIA Headquarters. (u)

[redacted] said that he had bought electronic equipment from [redacted] who received $400,000 from [redacted] and paid him with his checks. He did not specify the amount. It is said that whenever the KCIA purchased electronic equipment from [redacted] [redacted] he bought used equipment, repaired it and shipped it as new equipment. (S) researcher at the Center for Defense Information, said that he received an offer to travel to Korea. However, he did not go to Korea. (X) DC

5. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] said that the Korean Government gave the Institute for Sino-Soviet Studies at GWU $20,000 for holding a seminar. (X) PARK Chong-kyu, then chief of the presidential protection forces, attended the seminar. (X) DC

When [REDACTED] told [REDACTED] to read a copy of a letter written by PARK Chong-kyu addressed to Dr. Goston Sigur, director of the institute, he refused to read the letter, saying: "I don't want to read another person's private letter. Have one of your staff members read it." In his closing remarks, he admonished the subcommittee not to infringe upon the freedom of academic studies. (X)

1. Rear Admiral Gene R. La Rocque, USN (Ret.), Center for Defense Information, said that in 1976 he and his associate accepted an offer to travel to Korea from Ambassador HAHM and visited Korea. He acknowledged that he had received an honorary Ph.D. degree from Korea University. He, however, commented that, "We should be no more complacent about illegal acts carried out by our allies than by our opponents. The consequences can be equally damaging to our institution."
